

Maternity leave masterclass

We all know the pay gap and the retirement gulf sucks.

While turning that tide takes time, being smart with super during maternity leave is something you can implement quickly and with huge upside in the future.

Last year Australia welcomed 300 thousand new babies.<sup>1</sup> Here's three baby steps to start bridging the retirement gap today.

Step 1

Scan There are plenty of scans for expectant parents - add one more in, a scan for missing super. If you've got multiple accounts you're paying extra fees and losing out on compound interest.

Step 2

Plan Sharing the news is a big part of being a parent. Tell our smartCoach about the newest addition and they'll be able to help explain what contributions and insurance options are available to you before, during and after the arrival of your newest family member.

Step 3

Pram You'll be pushing on the day, and on the pram for a long time to come. Consider pushing more into your super before the arrival and after as well. Contact our smartCoach for help building a plan.
