5. Declaration and agreement

Duty of disclosure

Before you become covered by the insurer, you need to disclose to the insurer anything that you know, or could reasonably be expected to know, may affect the insurer’s decision to insure you and on what terms. You also need to do so before you extend, vary or reinstate your insurance cover. You owe the insurer a statutory duty of disclosure under the Insurance Contracts Act 1984 (Cth). If you fail to disclose these things to the insurer, this may be treated as a failure to comply with this statutory duty. The insurer may then have the rights described below. You do not need to tell the insurer anything that reduces the insurer’s risk, is common knowledge, the insurer knows or should know as an insurer, or the insurer waives your duty to tell it about.

The insurer has a number of rights in the event of non-disclosure. In exercising these rights, the insurer may consider whether different types of cover can constitute separate contracts of life insurance. If they do, the insurer may apply the following rights separately to each type of cover. The rights are as follows:

- If you do not tell the insurer anything you are required to, and the insurer would not have provided the insurance if you had told them, the insurer may avoid the contract within 3 years of entering into it.
- If the insurer chooses not to avoid the contract, the insurer may, at any time, reduce the amount of insurance provided. This would be worked out using a formula that takes into account the premium that would have been payable if you had told the insurer everything you should have. However, if the contract provides cover on death, the insurer may only exercise this right within 3 years of entering into the contract.
- If the insurer chooses not to avoid the contract or reduce the amount of insurance provided, the insurer may, at any time vary the contract in a way that places the insurer in the same position they would have been in if you had told the insurer everything you should have. However, this right does not apply if the contract provides cover on death.
- If the failure to tell the insurer is fraudulent, the insurer may refuse to pay a claim and treat the contract as if it never existed.

Economic or trade sanctions

If you have a trade or economic sanction placed against you then you will not be eligible for insurance cover and would not be paid out on any claim received on or after that date. The insurer could be exposed to penalties or restrictions if cover was provided to a sanctioned person.
